

Stephen Bishop – The heart is so willing (1986)

Written by K. Wakefield, M.Colombier

I feel your every breath; I hear the words you say,
And I keep turning back to hear the music play,

I make no promises, those promises, can break you,
How can you call me home, wanting me like yesterday?

Where do we build a house, how do the roses grow?
Are you and I in love, how do we really know?
If love is on our side, you'll know we're in trouble,
That's when my heart decides to go wherever you will go

The heart is so willing to follow,
The heart shows the way out of the night,
The heart runs in search of tomorrow,
When loves takes the hand that guides the light

When the shadows fall and there's no one there to hear,
I'll listen...

I feel your every breath, I hear the words you say,
And I keep turning back, to hear the music play,

I make no promises, those promises, can break you,
How can you call me home, wanting me like yesterday?

How do we fix the moon, how do we change the sky?
How do I make her laugh, the way I make you cry?

I make no promises, those promises, can break you,
But love's no accident, time is on my side

The heart is so willing to follow,
The heart shows the way out of the night,
The heart runs in search of tomorrow,
When loves takes the hand that guides the light...!

The heart is so willing to follow,
Yes the heart is so willing to follow...!
The heart shows the way out of the night,
Oh, the heart is so, Oh, the heart is...!
The heart runs in search of tomorrow,
Search of tomorrow!
When loves takes the hand that guides the light...!!
(Repeat Chorus)
